What is your topic?

My topic is anti social. Anti social means:

not sociable; not wanting the company of others. Basically not opening to other people

Why I am interested in this topic?

I am interested in this topic because I was anti social at one point in my life and I didnt want to open to other people and I kept a lot of things to myself

Does child abuse cause anti social?

People wondering if being abused causes Antisocial.

In some cases yes but everyone is different some people experiences tragic events that causes them to be anti social, and some people just stay quiet to themselves

I interviewed 3 people about this topic and the 3 people had different response about this topic

The first person i interviewed said they were anti social because of what he experienced in his early childhood and it affected them later on in life.

The second person i interviewed said they people can be anti social in different ways they don't have to communicate in a big group but can talk to someone one on one because they don't like being in big groups

The third person said being antisocial is not bad or good because you more to yourself but you have to learn how to open up to people

My responses to the 3 interview

I interviewed all 3 people and took notes from their responses and i agree with all the reponses people can be antisocial in different ways and i think people can overcome it but it takes time because i overcame it but i'm still working on it.

Conclusion

Being Antisocial can come with a lot of obstacle but you can overcome it by working on yourself and find something that makes you opening up more. For example i signed up to a gym and i learn how to open up more because i ask questions and i challenged myself to talk more to people and i wanna help other with their problems too
