Sustainable Development Goals (SDG): What are they? Why are they needed?

The Sustainable Development Goals are a collection of 17 global goals designed to be a "blueprint to achieve a better and more sustainable future for all."

The SDG I chose is number 3, Good health

Do you think that they can help improve Social Inequality in America? Around the world? Why or why not?

I believe that the sustainable development goals project definitely CAN help more things than just inequality. They have the plans already cut out for us we just need to accommodate to them and take action with them not just have them sitting there. The next year will be a repeat of last year until we all get up and go after whatever it is we want.

These plans/goals have all the potential in the world. But they will stay as potentials until we make them a reality. There aren't enough people on this project to make a massive change. Like I've never heard about this till now.

What role can you as a young person play in bringing about a just world? What can you do to change the world?

The role that I as a person, especially being a young person most of us have a strong social media base to get larger messages across but instead we use it to make eachothers selfies and travel go viral. We still aren't talking about how china's having a whole holocaust and columbia's having a real life purge. We can all rise against how our system is places and get the best health care for everyone.

If we just get off of social media and open up the media to inform ourselves about everything THEN use social media to have a massive viral stand on everything things might start to change.

How do you want your kids to live? With good medicine and doctors or the worst?

Make the change NOW.

We have voices, USE them.

What sociological concepts , theories or themes can you apply to the social inequality that is prevalent in the society (US and around the world) and how do you think that the SDGs can alleviate some of them?

Some concept ideas that can apply to the social inequality in the united states are the income gap between races, female and males, gender inequality and even how some groups of people get better healthcare than others. Healthcare being one of the biggest problems, too many people die because they aren't able to afford the right treatment or see the good doctors.

This is also where white supremacy steps in, they always have easy access to everything and have the money to promote everything and anything they want. If these lottery owners took all that money and just split it all evenly they could cure poverty and get everyone the best healthcare but instead they'd prefer to give it all to one person.

If our government would just properly acknowledge the SDG's and came up with something similar we'd have must less problems in the world

This is venezuela. They have people in these conditions in hospitals. Can you imagine being like that?

This is what dying children look like from not receiving medicine or proper care look like. No child or human being should live like this.

How does this affect your career or how can you relate?

Well, as a future plastic surgeon or general physician I refuse to work under those conditions. I would fight for a better health care system considering I will be an addition to the health care system.

Especially as a plastic surgeon I'll need clean and medically safe surgery rooms AND post surgery rooms. All patients wounds must be kept free of bacteria to avoid infections.

How does my topic relate to my SDG?

My topic relates to my sdg because with time if we keep going at this rate our offsprings won't last long. With no healthcare system how will we save people from diseases? We can't. My future career also depends on this evolvment, patients will die at my hands with a bad healthcare system if i can't provide them with what they need because their medicaid won't cover it.
